1x1

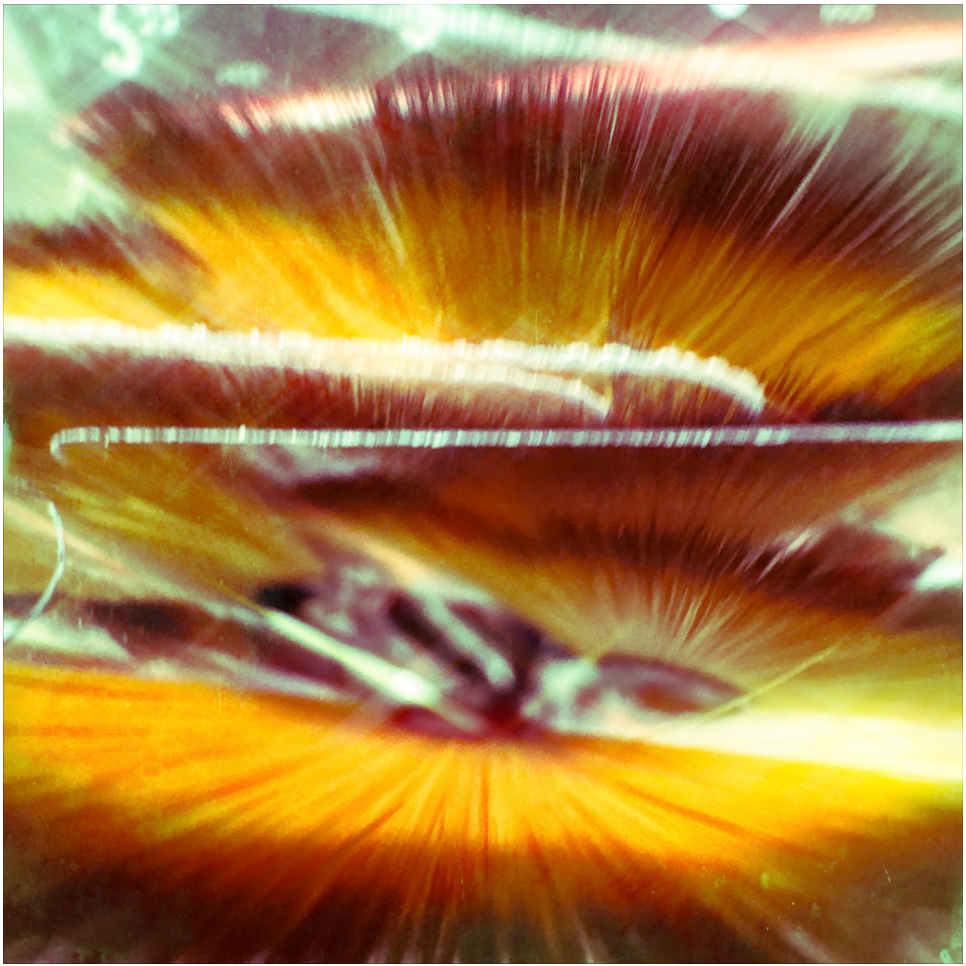

Chris “Photo” Denbow

The ocean swallowed a neon sunrise.

Somebody hit the accelerator inside a sunset.

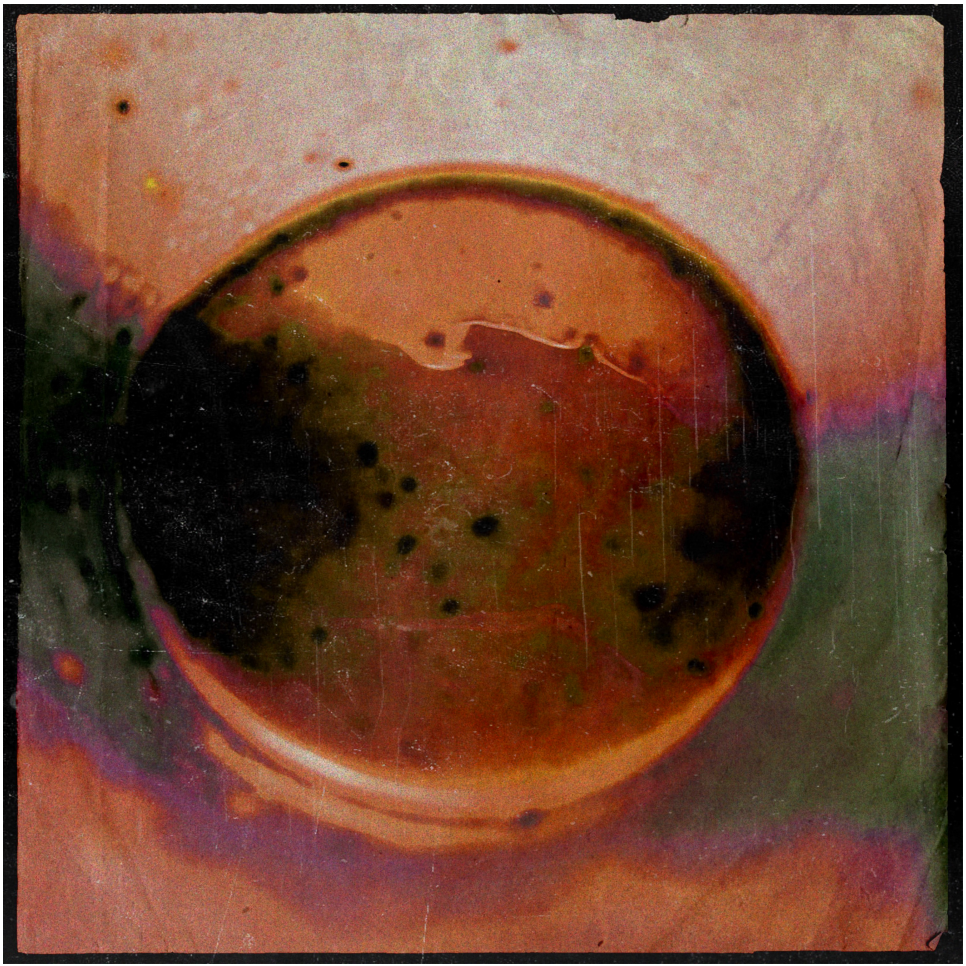

Winter opened one enormous blue eye.

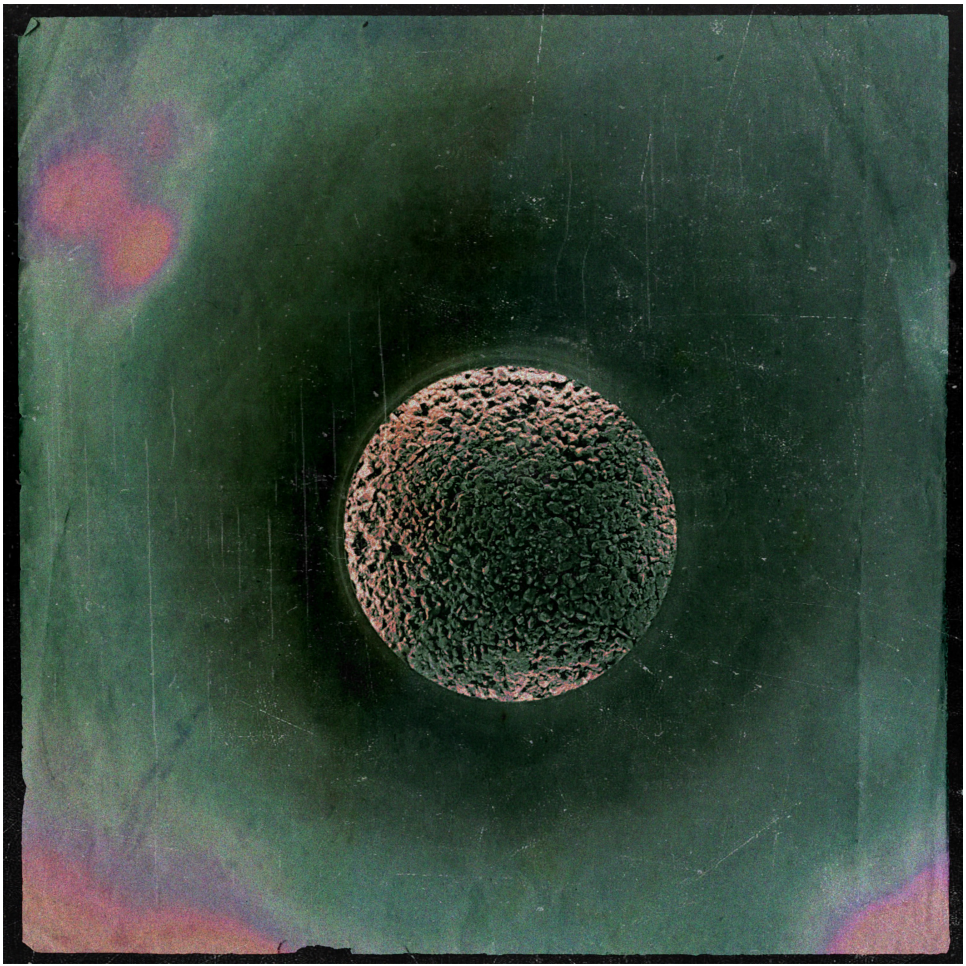

The forest burned quietly behind the glass.

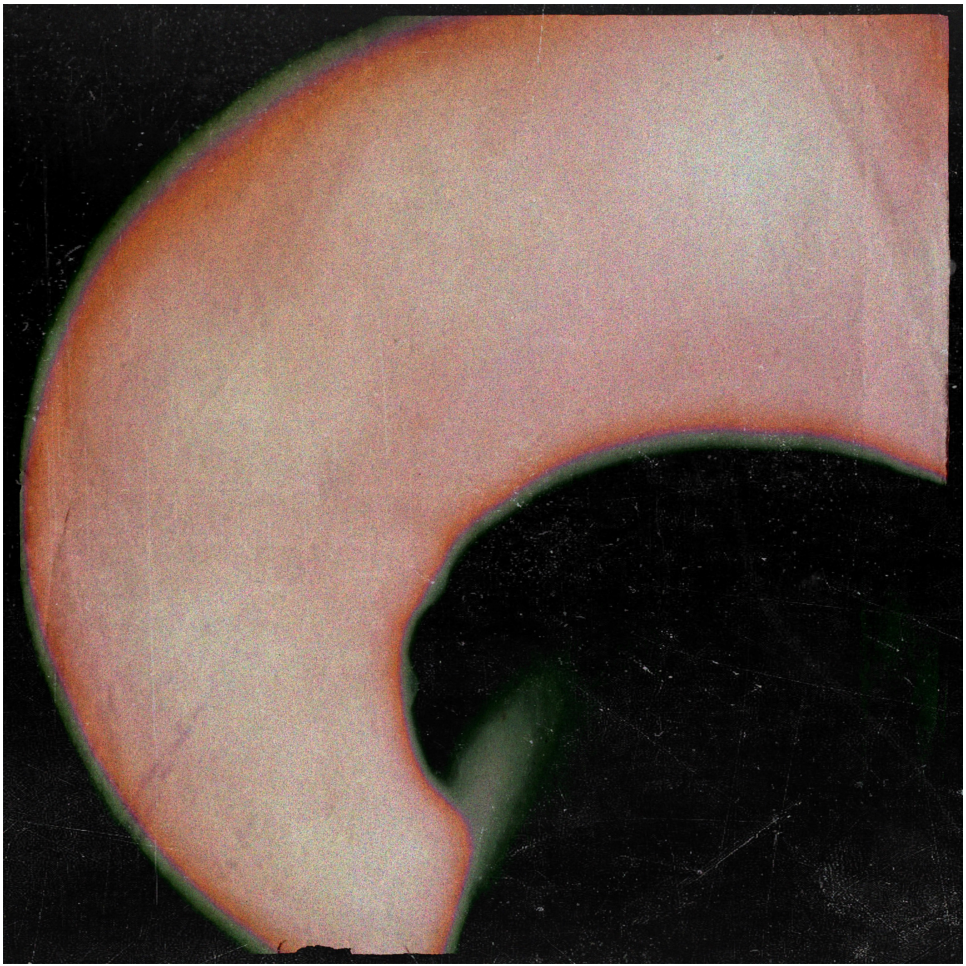

A forgotten planet steeped in amber.

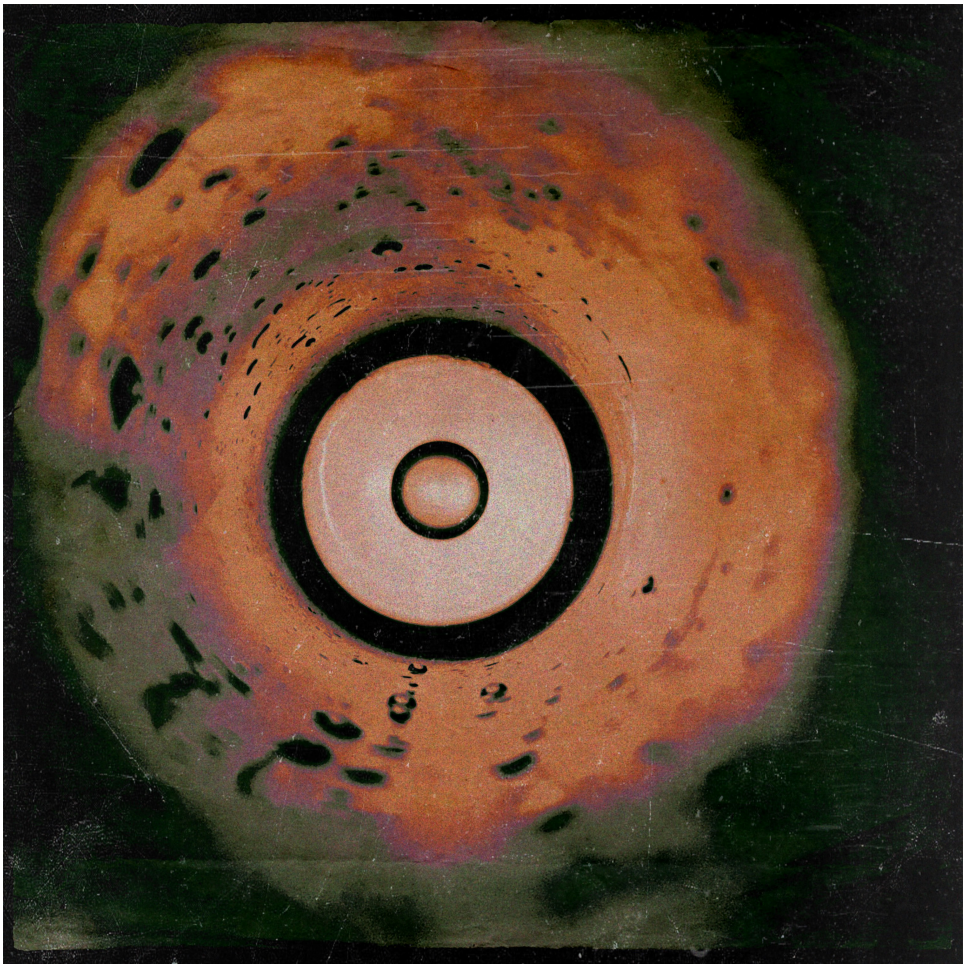

The moon settled into a velvet green pocket.

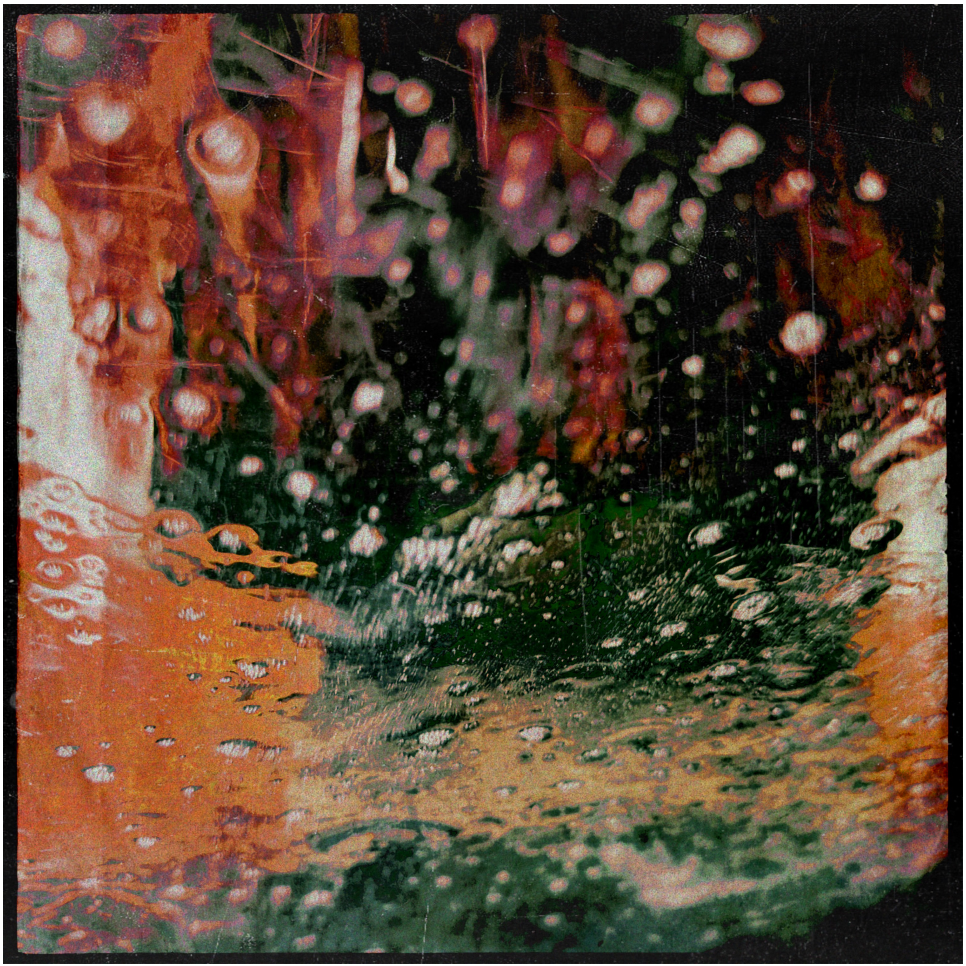

A peach-colored wave curled around midnight.

Saturn sent a postcard without a return address.

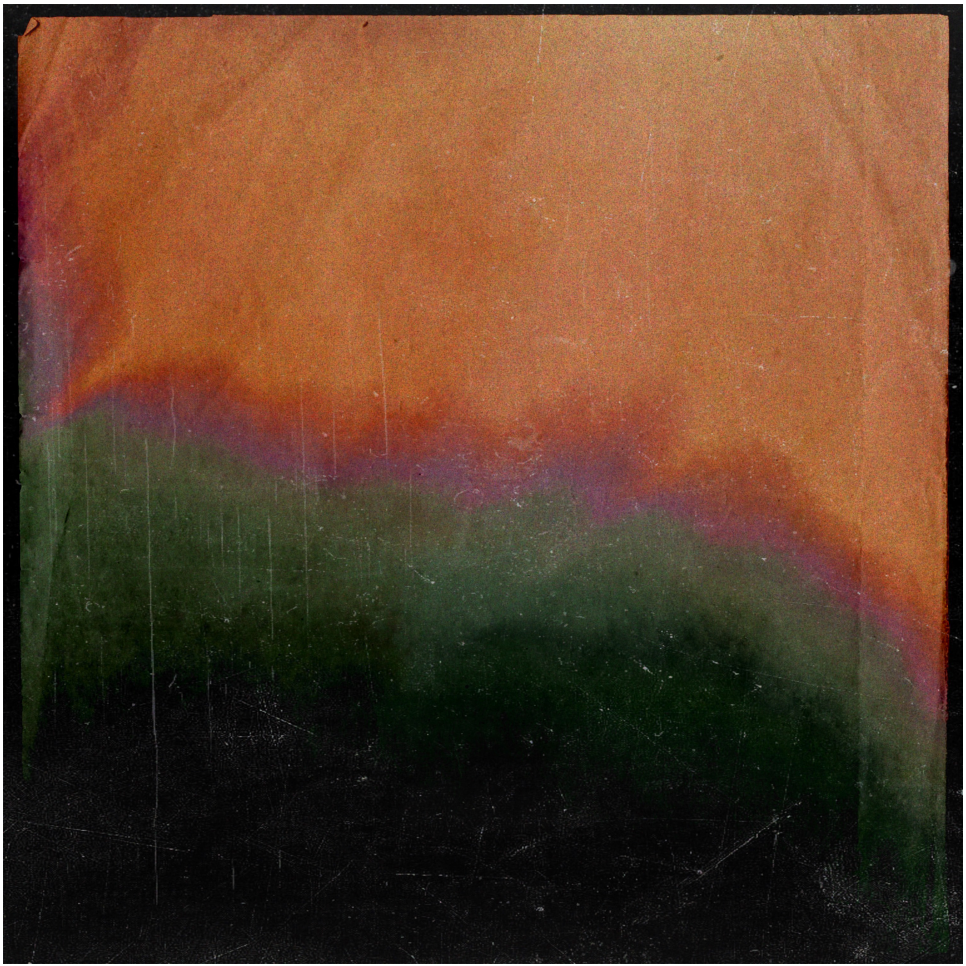

Confetti drifted through the city’s last dream.

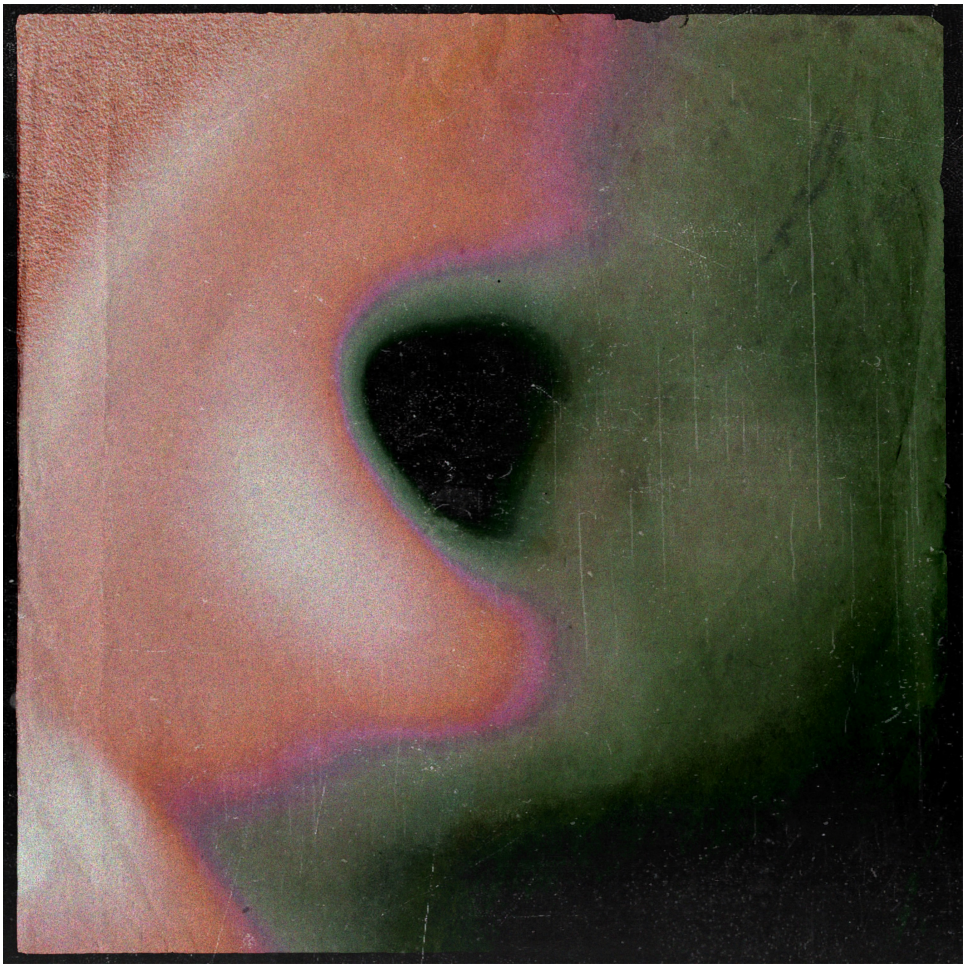

Memory left its fingerprints on the afternoon.

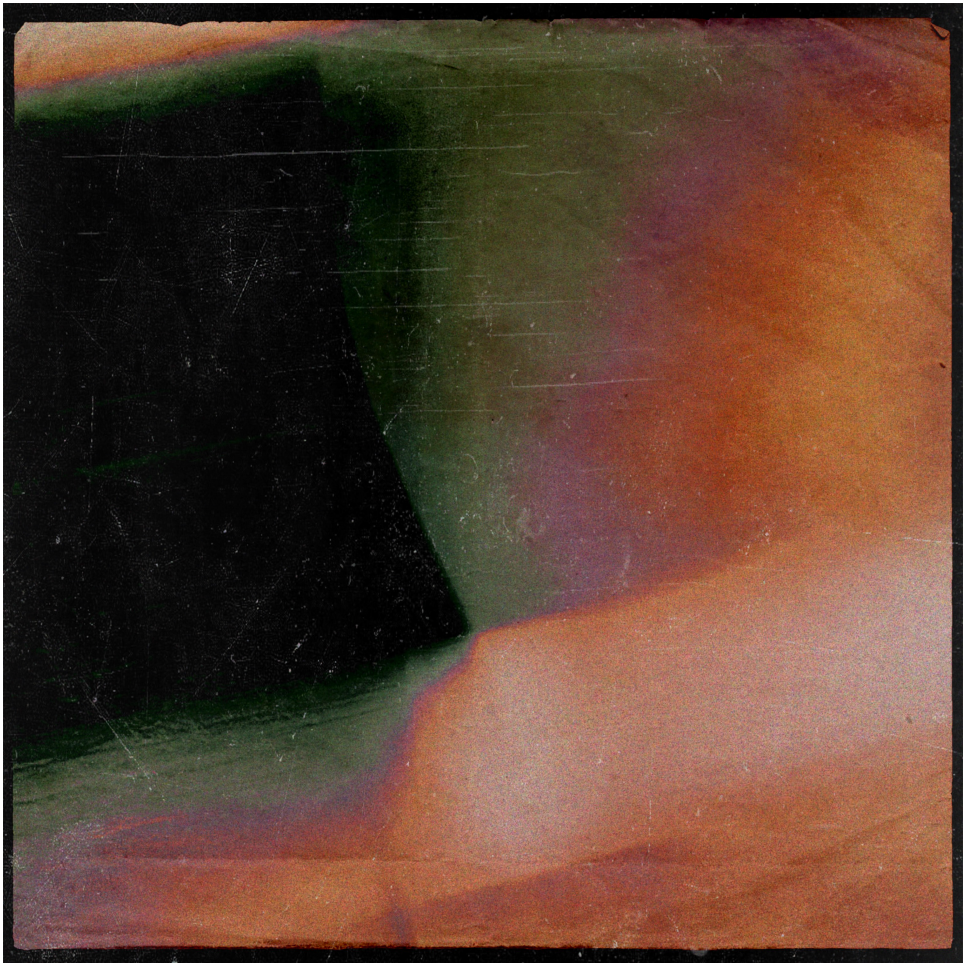

The horizon wore rust and kept its secrets.

A small darkness found a soft place to hide.

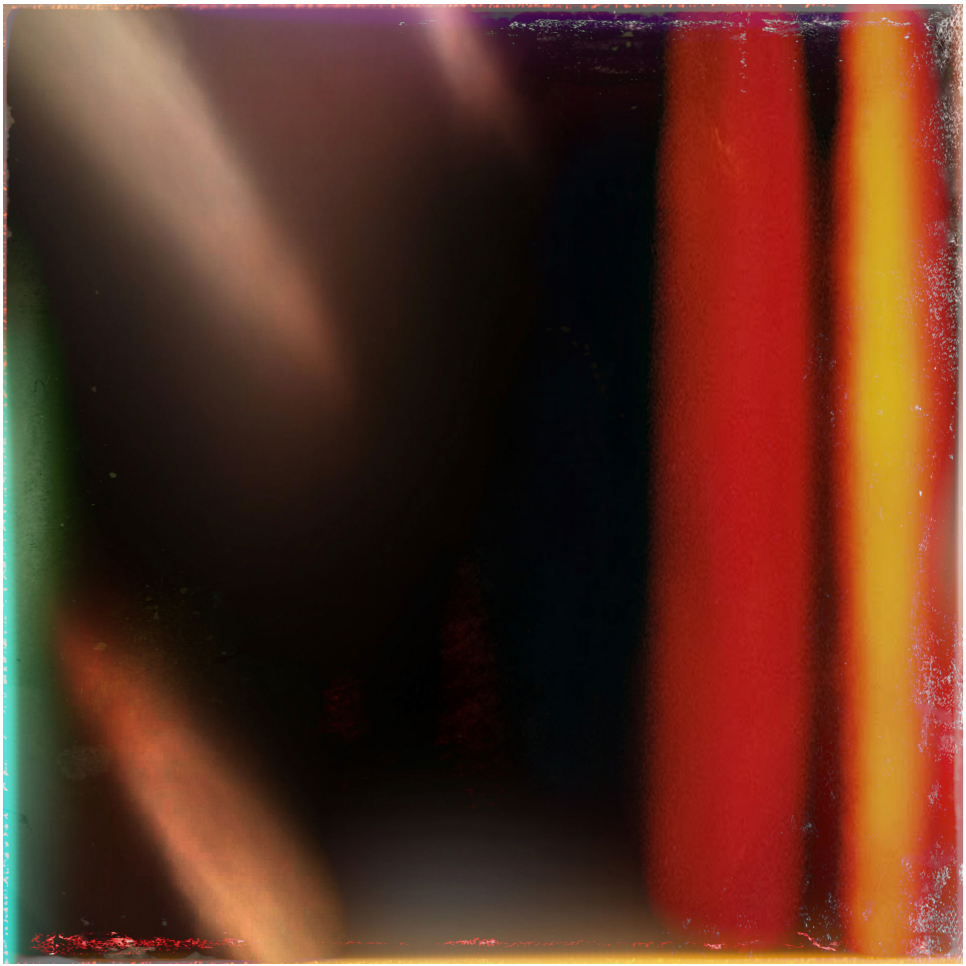

The doorway leaned closer to hear the silence.

A violet ghost wandered into the shallows.

Someone left the red curtain slightly open.

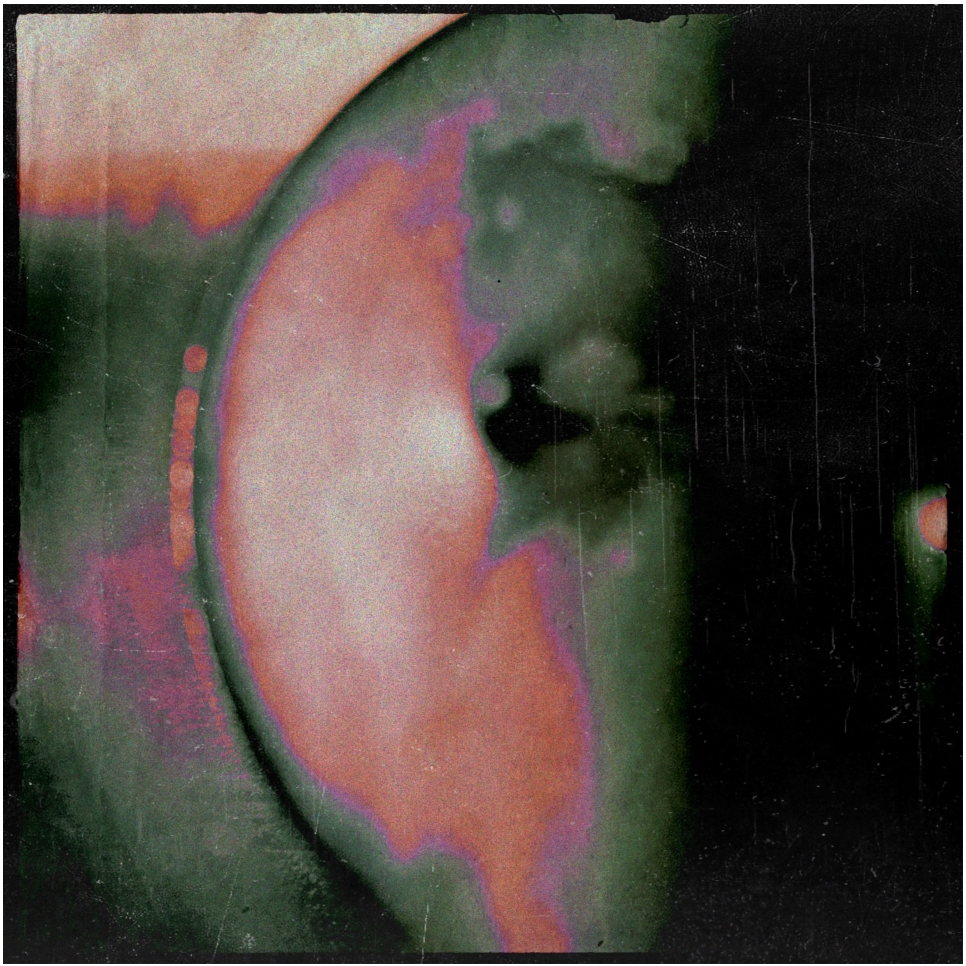

The universe assembled itself from broken candy.

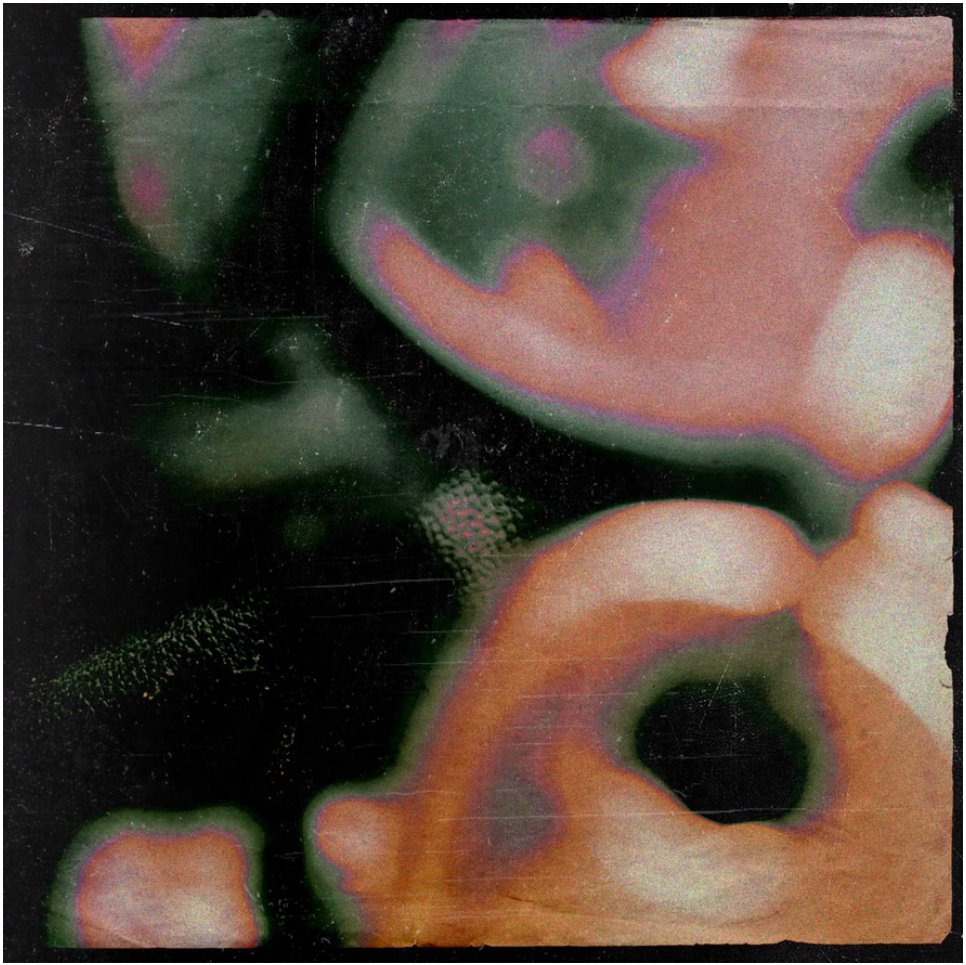

A pink river slipped between sleeping buildings.

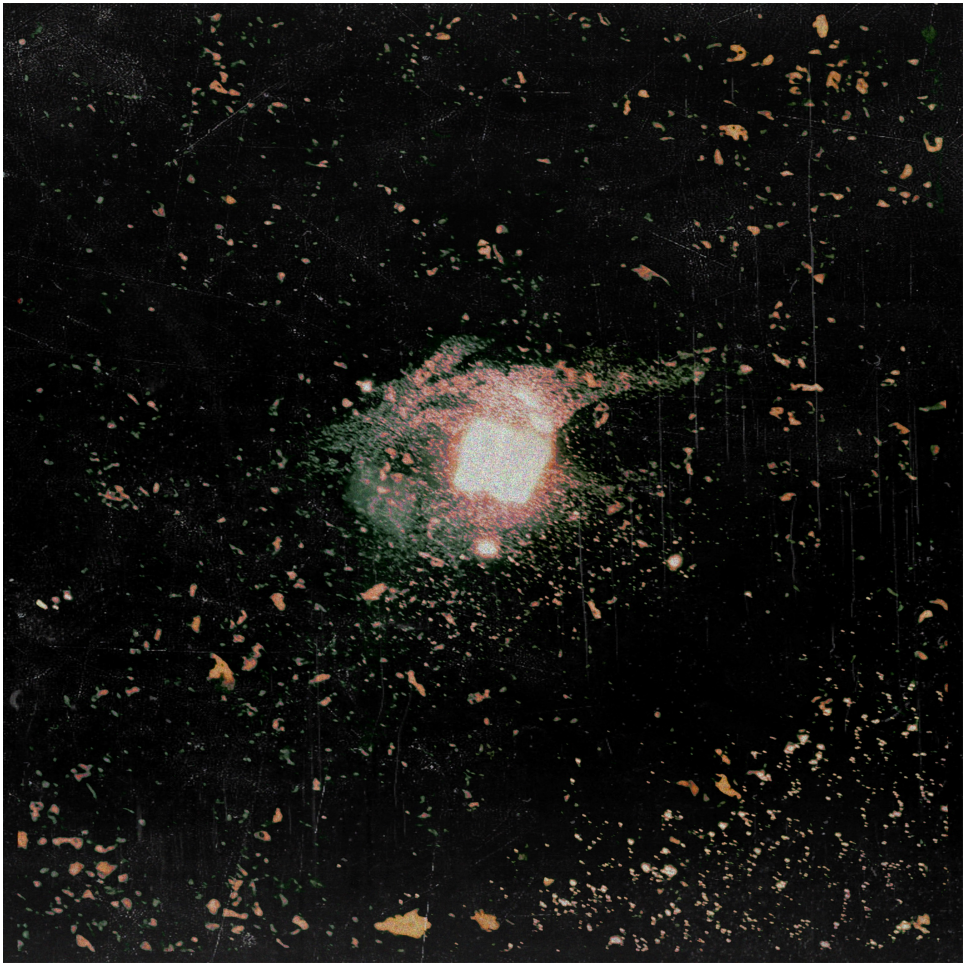

An unfinished moon turned toward home.

Two strange creatures negotiated the shape of a dream.

One stubborn star kept the whole darkness awake.

1 x 1

Photographs by Chris “Photo” Denbow
Shot on Hipstamatic camera
Using the unique MojoChrome film

October 2026

1 x1

Photo zine

chrisdenbow.website